

WORTH IN LAUREL

RUSSOIA IN LOWELL.
Great Excitement—Girls Locked up to Prevent an Explosion of Enthusiasm, &c.
FROM OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.
LOWELL, MASS., Wednesday, May 5—2 P. M.
Kossuth arrived here from Boston, at a quarter past one o'clock this afternoon, in an extra train, which was decorated with flags. His arrival was announced to the citizens by the firing of guns and the poaling of the church bells. Great preparations were made to receive him, and a large crowd were waiting at the Northern depot, who greeted him with loud cheers on his arrival. A procession was then formed according to the following programme, which was fully carried out:--

1. The Cavaleade formed across the Arch Bridge, right resting on Thorndike street.
2. The Military, with the Cornet Band, formed on Mil-

3. Kosworth and Suite and Committee of Arrangements in carriages.
4. The Fire Department formed on Thorndike, right resting on Middlesex street.
5. Other Associations, and citizens generally, formed on Dutton street, right resting on Thorndike street.

The procession moved in the following order:—

Kosworth being received at the Northern depot : up Middlesex street to the Franklin school house, where it counter-marched and returned to the point of starting, thence through Thorndike, Dutton, to the Merrimack Mills

The factory girls, who, it was expected, would be allowed off work from 12 o'clock, to form a part of the procession, were greatly disappointed, as the mill owners would not permit them, and locked the gates of their various establishments to prevent it. The reason assigned is, that having lost much time by the late freshets, they could not afford to have the mills idle for half a day. But the real reason is suspected to be that Kosciuszko could not stand as much kissing, as every one of the ten thousand expected to give him a buss, "as they kissed Gen. Jackson, on the occasion of his visit to the Manchuery of America." Each expected, also, to be introduced to him by name. They contended they had as good a right to this as the ladies elsewhere, and as the gun factory was in the vicinity of New Haven, and they insisted, as free women of Massachusetts, to have women's rights. This phase of the affair became rather alarming, and the idea was abandoned, which was somewhat like leaving the rest of the Bazaar of Denmark out of the play of "Hamlet." More than half the interest was destroyed, and several gentlemen who came here from Boston for the very purpose of seeing the girls, returned home in disgust. There were many of these girls, however, who would not take any part in the procession, being Irish Catholics, and they are nearly all opposed to him. There was a considerable number of Irish mechanics about the depot, and they did not cheer, but rather jeered. On the whole, the reception was cold and formal, and was marked by no enthusiasm whatever.

There were various flags displayed from the hotels, public buildings, stores, and private houses, along the route of the procession, but they were at long intervals.

The local papers of to-day have taken the matter quite cool—some of them entirely silent—and one leaving the following significant paragraph, which no doubt will be very palatable to Captain Leag, who, it is said, has invited Kossuth to Exeter:—

A SPEECH.—Some of the speeches made by members of the Legislative Committee, and others, since the ar-ever among us of the guest of the State, will probably never be reported. The Boston correspondent of the Springfield Republican says of a speech of Anson Burlingame, at Worcester:—He cursed Consul Hodges first, and then prayed that eternal infamy might form a halo round his head. "Would to God," said he, turning to Knowlton, "that the frigate Mississippi had gone down by her anchors in the harbor of Marselles, or that the number of the scoundrels had run below ere Capt. Long had disgraced the banners of the American nation, by compelling four illustrious statesmen to kneel when cheered by the French democrats!" This language excited a feeling of great disgust, and French gentlemen were

The people seemed to be occupied pretty much about their ordinary business, and acted as if nothing remarkable was taking place. As the procession, however, moved on, the crowd increased, all being anxious to get a peep at Kosuth. There were four military companies in the procession. Kosuth occupied a carriage drawn by four gray horses, and was accompanied by the Mayor.

LOWELL, May 5, 1863.
At eight o'clock this evening Kosuth delivered a speech in St. Paul's Church, the admission to which was by Hungarian bonds.
He was addressed by Elisha Huntington, Mayor of Lowell.
Kosuth, in reply, thanked His Honor and the people for the demonstration they had given him. He apologized for his want of eloquence, and said Cicero and Demosthenes were immortalized, though they had spoken but about thirty times; but he had spoken five hundred times in the United States, and it was hard for him to be eloquent. He praised Lowell and said it was full of instruction to him. He had heard of it long ago. It reminded him of the mechanic arts of his own country. In advertising to socialism, he said it was a fatal movement. It was the fatal symptom of a deep disease. There were three peculiarities in the industry of Lowell. First—That whereas in other countries the factory people were doomed to be wretches till the day of their death, here there was Secondly—That in other countries this portion of the population was the greatest, but not the best—here they were patterns of virtue. (Suppressed laughter.) Thirdly—That the greater part of the victor population are of the better sort, and whose family virtues must spread from Lowell all over the country. (Applause and suppressed laughter.) Here was another virtue, he had discovered, that the people of Lowell sympathized with the principles of liberty.

The proceedings were terminated with the air
God save the Queen," and "Yankee Doodle."
Kosuth left in a special train at 10 o'clock for Boston.

---

Meteorological Observations.
BY MORSE'S MAGNETIC LINE, OFFICE NO. 2 WALL STREET.
WEDNESDAY, May 5, 1862.

BUFFALO 9 A. M.—Barometer 29.85. Thermometer 68.
N. B. North. Clear and pleasant morning.
9 P. M.—Barometer 29.80. Thermometer 60. Wind
North. Clear and pleasant.

ROCHESTER, N. A. M.—Clear and pleasant. Wind west. Thermometer 45.
 9 P. M.—Beautiful evening, and has also been a fine day. Wind northwest. Thermometer 61.
 ALBANY, N. A. M.—The weather is very fine this morning. Thermometer 50 Wind northwest.
 6 P. M.—Fine, clear evening. Thermometer 60. Wind north.
 SYRACUSE, N. A. M.—A very beautiful morning. Wind south. Thermometer 55
 6 P. M.—Pleasant evening. Wind northwest. Thermometer 60.

UTAH. 9 A. M.—A warm and pleasant spring morning. Thermometer 59. Wind west.
 6 P. M.—Clear pleasant evening. Wind west. Thermometer 68.
 ALBANY. 9 A. M.—A bright, summer morning. Wind east. Thermometer 63.
 9 P. M.—Barometer 29.670. Thermometer 60. Sky
 clear. Wind west. It is a beautiful evening.
 TROY. 9 P. M.—It has been a beautiful day. Pleasant, twilight evening. Wind north. Thermometer 58.

From Baltimore.
ARRIVAL OF FIRE COMPANIES—BRIDGING THE SUSQUEHANNA, ETC.
BALTIMORE, May 5, 1882.
The Baltimore fire companies arrived here this afternoon, accompanied by the Columbia Company of New York, who will be the guests of Friendship Company here. Tomorrow they go to Washington.
The bill relative to the bridging of the Susquehanna has been made the order of the day, in the Maryland Legislature.

WHEELER MOVEMENT IN BOSTON.—The Boston Herald of yesterday contains the following:—
MEETING OF THE WHEELER CLUB OF WARD BRIGHT.—
The meeting of this excellent Club at the United States hall last evening, was very fully attended and the most enthusiastic applause greeted each speaker as the name of

At Webster, we were entertained in conjunction with the industry of the United States. Mr. Geo. W. Warren, treasurer of the Club, was in the chair. Several gentlemen addressed the Club, among whom we noticed Charles Leonard D. W. Haskell, M. E. Smith, Geo. L. Drinker, S. O. Cobb and S. G. Bates.

The conference proved to be a series of making some contribution of the Webster Club in this city and a day meeting finally to his contribution was provided. We were told that the Committee on the proposed (a) for the Webster Club, which is a committee of the Webster Association, which is a club organized at the Webster High School, and a day meeting with the American in rolling out the new editions of Boomer and a vicinity traveled to the coronation of Mr. Webster for the Presidency. This committee consists of names including from the town, and related to, those in the meeting was those adjusted.